

Northwest planes collide, killing 8

Associated Press

ROMULUS, Mich. — A jetliner clipped another while preparing to take off from the Detroit airport in heavy fog Monday, igniting a fire that left one plane in smoking ruins. At least eight people were killed and 20 injured, officials said. It was not immediately clear what caused the collision between a DC-9 and a Boeing 727-200, both operated by Northwest Airlines. A spokesman for air traffic controllers said the DC-9 appeared to have become lost on a slick, foggy taxiway and strayed into the 727's path. For nearly an hour after the accident, smoke billowed out of the fuselage of the DC-9, where passengers apparently became trapped by the fast-moving fire. By the time the fire was extinguished, much of the plane's roof was open to the mercercast sky.

Officials had initially said 19 people were killed, but Northwest officials and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said that was wrong. McNamara said the medical examiner had "swept through the wreckage twice and found nine bodies," while Northwest spokesman Bob Gibbons said the coroner "told a Northwest representative that there were eight dead."

Gibbons stressed that authorities were not ruling out further changes in the death toll. "This is probably going to go up or down all evening," he said shortly after 7 p.m.

The DC-9, Flight 1482 to Pittsburgh, was carrying 39 passengers and four crewmembers, according to the airline.

The 727, Flight 299 to Memphis, was carrying 146 passengers. Both flights had originated in Detroit, said Patrick McCann, a Northwest spokesman at its headquarters in Egan, Minn.

"Apparently the right wing of the 727 hit the aft section, the engine of the DC-9, taking the engine off," said Alan Muncester, another Northwest spokesman.

"That resulted in the fire. That, at this point, is all we know."

At the time of the crash, visibility was poor and the ground was wet from a morning snow and sleet storm that delayed flights at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Muncester said the airport had been closed to inbound traffic but planes were being allowed to take off.

Tony Dresden, a spokesman for the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, said there was about a quarter-mile visibility in the air, but only about 800 feet on the ground.

"We've had some discussions with our people out there," Dresden said. "The DC-9 pilot became lost on the runways. The pilot gave the ground controller erroneous information about his position and turned right onto the runway where the 727 was taxiing."

"The DC-9 pilot discovered at the very last moment where he was, and so the ground controller told him to immediately get off that runway, but it was too late."

He stressed that his information was preliminary. The Federal Aviation Administration, which supervises air traffic controllers, did not immediately comment about Dresden's statement.

Sanctions could allow Iraq to prepare for war

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States cannot be sure economic sanctions will ever force Iraq out of Kuwait, and waiting for such an uncertain outcome would risk erosion of the international coalition behind military force, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Monday.

Cheney, laying out to the Senate Armed Services Committee the administration's rationale for building up a military force for possible attack in the Persian Gulf, gave the most pessimistic view yet on the potential of sanctions to work.

"Given the nature of the regime, given Saddam Hussein's brutality to his own people, his very tight control of that society, his ability to allocate resources for the military, their ability to produce their own food ... he can ride them out," Cheney told the committee.

Several of the panel's Democrats, including chairman Sam Nunn of Georgia, contended the administration seemed to be dismissing sanctions too easily. "If we go to war, we never will know whether they would have worked," Nunn said.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, voiced misgivings about a "Chicken Little approach to our policy. The sky is falling and the only option is war."

Cheney spelled out in detail the U.S. position that American and international interests are in jeopardy in the gulf crisis, contending that Saddam might gain a stranglehold on oil, that he is destroying Kuwait and that his continued military buildup could mean further aggression.

"It is not so clear that time is altogether on our side," Cheney said, a statement that appeared in conflict with earlier administration pronouncements. As recently as Oct. 15, Cheney himself had said the opposite.

He said Monday that lengthy reliance on sanctions would cede to Saddam the ability to determine future events. "Such a policy would give Hussein a long breathing space" during which he could augment his army, Cheney contended.

"It is far better for us to deal with him now ... than it will be for us to deal with him five or 10 years from now, when the members of the coalition have gone their separate ways and when Saddam has become an even better armed and more threatening regional superpower than he is at present," Cheney said.

As for authority to attack Saddam, Cheney said in response to a question from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, "I do not believe the president requires any additional authority from the Congress before committing U.S. forces to achieve our objectives in the gulf."

Bush will still visit Argentina

Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — President Bush shrugged off a military revolt in Argentina and proclaimed "a new era of hope" in newly democratic South America as he opened a five-nation tour Monday. Bush vowed not to skip a visit to Buenos Aires, and, indeed, the uprising there collapsed by day's end.

The administration expressed confidence the rebellion would be quelled quickly but also left room for a late change in Bush's plans. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said: "If the situation became such that there was a real danger to his security, I'm sure we'd take another look at it."

The Argentine crisis threw a cloud over Bush's week-long mission, intended to celebrate the sweep of democracy throughout the hemisphere. It also obscured Bush's message that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was driving up oil prices and forcing poor countries to pay high fuel bills that they could ill afford.

In Argentina, the government put down the last remnants of the uprising by bombing rebel tanks. The government news agency said the last of several hundred rebels had surrendered.

Francisco Rezek, foreign minister of Brazil, called the revolt in Argentina "a step backward for democracy in Latin America."

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Monday evening that the situation in Buenos Aires "does appear to be improving" and that Argentine President Carlos Menem was in control.

"It is not a large-scale uprising," Fitzwater said. "My argument would be that fundamentally democracy in Argentina is working, and when this is over it will demonstrate the roots of democracy in Argentina are fairly deep."

Bush said he would not abandon a planned stop Wednesday in Buenos Aires, where Menem declared a state of siege, suspending constitutional guarantees, after the fourth military uprising in four years.

"I have great confidence in the security there," Bush said.

Citizens heed earthquake predictions

Associated Press

NEW MADRID, Mo. — This tiny southeast Missouri town might be undaunted by an earthquake forecast, but on Monday it was far from business as usual.

Reporters from around the country lurked at every corner, the governor visited and tavern owners opened their doors early as the Mississippi River town of 3,200 enjoyed the spotlight.

The quake commotion was caused by Iben Browning, a climatologist, who said the chances were 50-50 that a major quake would hit the New Madrid Fault zone in early December. The fault runs from Marked Tree, Ark., to Cairo, Ill.

Browning based his projection on tidal forces, which on Sunday were at their highest level in 60 years. He also mentioned several other locations including Tokyo and the Middle East for possible quakes.

Browning, who lives in Tijeras, N.M., was on vacation and unavailable for comment, said his daughter, Evelyn Browning Garriss.

Earthquake experts and local seismologists have called Browning's theory unscientific and said his projection is worthless, but that didn't stop some schools from canceling classes and the sale of earthquake kits.

Missouri Gov. John Ashcroft toured New Madrid and several other small towns Monday to make sure everyone knew that there was no cause for alarm. New Madrid was the site of what's considered to be two of the nation's strongest quakes, in 1811 and 1812. The last major earthquake on the fault occurred in 1895.

"Panic is inconsistent with the appropriate response to living in an earthquake-prone area," Ashcroft said during a visit to the home of an elementary school principal, whose school was closed.

At least four counties in southeast Missouri closed their courthouses just in case Browning was right. Some schools that stayed open reported higher than usual absences — 34 percent in one southern Indiana district. In Franklin, Tenn., 30 miles west of Nashville, teachers let young students bring teddy bears and favorite toys to school for extra comfort.

In St. Louis and Memphis, Tenn., the two largest cities closest to the fault zone, the projection didn't have much of an impact on the usual back-to-work rush.

"It's just been another regular day," said Memphis police Capt. Chuck Ewerling.

Radio commercials urged St. Louisians to buy a device called "Quake Awake," which is a sort of earthquake alarm clock that will sound when the ground moves. The cost was $39.95 and next-day delivery was available.

In New Madrid, at Hap's Bar and Grill, owner Jack Hailey had his hands full serving the media and his regular customers who came in after shifts at nearby aluminum and power plants.

He had opened his "Shake, Rattle and Roll" party at 6 a.m. to accommodate a radio station from St. Louis that was broadcasting live from his tavern.

Ty Detmer receives the Brigham Award from President Rex E. Lee at a pep rally held Monday.

Ty Detmer honored at Provo rally

By JOHN MILLER
Universe Sports Writer

Ty Detmer put Provo and BYU back on the map by winning the 1990 Heisman Trophy, and the community repaid him on Monday by rolling out the red carpet.

Provo Mayor Joe Jenkins, at the pep rally held in Detmer's honor, handed him the honorary key to Provo.

"In the past 20 to 25 years the key has been given to only two people. One to the vice president of the United States and the other to Ty Detmer," Jenkins said.

Utah County Commissioner Gary Herbert presented Detmer with a plaque to commemorate Dec. 3, 1990 as "The Official Utah County Ty Detmer Day."

The Cougar Club also honored Detmer by making him an honorary member.

Dallas Bradford, National Cougar Club President, said, "We wanted to give him a car, but we couldn't do that."

BYU President Rex Lee presented Detmer with the Brigham Award and said, "Winning the Heisman is a compliment to all the quarterbacks who played before him. And this Methodist has done more for the missionary effort than the missionaries out there in white shirts in the state of Utah."

Lee later said that the comment was a gross exaggeration.

He did not intend to demean the sacrifices and work being done by missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he said.

The BYU campus was decorated with banners saying, "Congratulations Ty — 1990 Heisman Winner."

And the "Y" that draped the west side of the Tanner Building had a "T" added to it to read "TY" in honor of the Heisman winner.

At nightfall Monday, the "Y" on the mountain was lit in Detmer's honor.

Detmer and his family knew from the start that BYU and Provo were the place for Ty to spend his college career.

"Provo is a perfect place for Ty — Ty is perfect for the school," Sonny Detmer, Ty's father, said.

"When we came to Provo and went around the town, we found the people there are real football fans."

"He didn't go up to BYU for the Heisman Trophy; he went up for the atmosphere. Winning the Heisman is

Ty Detmer doesn't take all the credit for winning the Heisman.

He said, "People in Provo mean the most because they have been there all year. This is where it all happened and going to New York doesn't put a damper on what happens here. It's just great to see all the excitement. There are so many people involved that you can't thank them all."

Jade Willis, 6, from Lindon, said, "I think it's great Ty won the Heisman."

BYU crime rate third among Utah colleges

By RUTH CLARK
Universe Staff Writer

Students nationwide will benefit from a new law as campuses across the country start to tally and publish their campus crime statistics.

BYU police, however, won't be reporting many changes in their policies with the new Crime Awareness and

In 1988, BYU reported 10 violent crimes: no murders or rapes, one robbery and nine aggravated assaults, according to the Uniform Crime Report. There were also 633 property crimes: 19 burglaries, 606 larceny-thefts and eight motor vehicle thefts. The 1989 Uniform Crime Report hasn't been released yet.

Clark said students believe there are terrible crime waves on campus, and that's not true. The new crime law might help clear that up.

"This (part of the) bill came as a result of some civil suits back East, and there are some universities around there that refuse to let anyone know what their policies are and and refuse to let people know what kind of crimes they're facing on campus because it would impact on their enrollment. It's a business, and they have to sell the university. Thankfully, BYU has been concerned about the safety of the students for a long, long time, and so these policies have been in place for years," he said.

Of the six crimes to be reported on, Clark said the university's largest problem is with theft. The problem, he said, is that people have a false sense of security when they come to BYU and leave their property around and their doors unlocked.

The USA Today survey showed BYU's total burglary/larceny/theft came to 505. The only other college in the state with a larger total was the U of U at 774.

"Between 50 and 60 percent of the people we arrest are non-affiliates...they're not students, they're not sons or daughters of faculty and staff. They are locals who come up here to take advantage of the students," he said.

Tobacco industry lobbied EPA for 3 years

For three years, the tobacco industry and its congressional allies have lobbied the Environmental Protection Agency to soften or delay its three draft reports on second-hand cigarette smoke, documents show.

Industry representatives sent the EPA a mountain of technical information that dwarfs the EPA's reports and met repeatedly with agency officials to press their concerns, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act.

"They clearly were privy to stuff that was going on that we had no idea about," said Mark Pertschuk, executive director of Americans for Nonsmokers' Rights in Berkeley, Calif.

The EPA at the industry's request twice extended the time allowed for outside comment on draft reports.

"No one else was as active in conveying their concerns and interests," said Robert Axelrad, director of the EPA's indoor air division. He said the agency received "boxloads" of material from the industry.

The next step in the preparation of the reports occurs Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington. An advisory panel chosen by the agency will meet to consider the reports and hear testimony from interested parties, including a dozen tobacco industry representatives.

Two of the three reports will be considered: a report assessing the lung cancer risks associated with passive smoking, and a workplace policy guide on environmental tobacco smoke.

Court boosts rights of criminal suspects

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday bolstered the right of criminal suspects to have lawyers present when questioned by police. Dissenters said the 6-2 ruling needlessly shackles law enforcement and protects the guilty.

In overturning the murder conviction of Mississippi death row inmate Robert S. Minnick, the court said his confession may not be used as evidence because he was questioned without his lawyer present.

The court said that unless a previously questioned suspect asks to talk to police, they may not renew questioning in the absence of his lawyer even after the suspect and attorney have conferred. The high court previously had barred police from resuming the questioning of a suspect who asks to see a lawyer for the first time, unless the suspect initiates the conversation.

In other action, the court agreed to use a case from Florida to decide whether police who have an owner's permission to search a car must get a court warrant before opening any containers inside the vehicle.

Kohl works on forming political coalition

BONN, Germany — One day after triumphing in all-German elections, Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Monday began talks with coalition allies on forming a new government and prepared to tackle enormous problems facing the new Germany.

His center-right coalition swept to victory in Sunday's parliamentary balloting, the first in a united Germany since 1932, but Kohl had little time to bask in the glory.

On Monday, the chancellor began talks with his Christian Democratic Union's current governing partners.

He was hit by an ultimatum from the Free Democrats, which made more gains in the elections than any other party. They said they would re-enter the coalition only if Kohl agreed that companies in former East Germany should pay lower taxes than those in former West Germany.

"No low-tax area, no vote for the chancellor," said Otto Lambsdorff, chairman of the Free Democrats, arguing that would be an important move toward encouraging badly needed investment in eastern Germany.

Kohl has said he opposes such a move, contending it is unnecessary.

Shuttle telescopes out of alignment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia's astronauts and ground teams struggled to fix problems with an observatory aboard the space shuttle Monday as precious viewing time faded away and targets were scratched.

"There's a definite loss as we go," mission scientist Ted Gull said. "Some objects are just going to slip off the list."

The trouble was with NASA's instrument pointing system, needed by three of the four telescopes that constitute the $150 million Astro observatory. The system's three star trackers were not in their precise alignment and were being finetuned, said mission manager Jack Jones.

While trying to overcome that problem, NASA geared up another star tracker on board, attached to a telescope, to spot targets. That tracker would be more awkward and time-consuming to use, however, since it is used for another purpose.

With the astronauts manually operating the pointing system in conjunction with that tracker, all three ultraviolet telescopes focused on a nearby star.

Rebel insurrection quelled in Argentina

BUEENOS AIRES, Argentina — The military crushed a daylong uprising Monday by hundreds of rebels demanding a shake-up in the army high command. At least 13 people were killed.

The right-wing insurrection occurred two days before President Bush was to visit. In Brazil, Bush said he will arrive as scheduled Wednesday.

The rebellion collapsed Monday night after tanks surrounded army headquarters, the one remaining rebel stronghold, and the last mutineers surrendered. Warplanes earlier bombed two columns of rebel tanks.

"The triumph of the armed forces was absolute," President Carlos Menem told a news conference. "The surrender was unconditional."

About 420 rebels surrendered, army officials said. Others were being sought. Rebel leader Col. Enrique Baraldini was among those arrested.

Monday's rebel leaders may face the death penalty. "The military code of justice contemplates that possibility," Menem said. "The full measure of law will be applied."

Grant sends BYU parasitologist to China

By STACY VAN BLANKENSTEIN
Universe Staff Writer

A BYU professor has recently been awarded a grant for $60,262 to continue his research of a human parasite. The research will be conducted in the People's Republic of China.

Dr. Ferron L. Andersen, a parasitologist, was awarded the grant by the Thrasher Research Fund in Salt Lake.

The research benefits children in developing countries. Andersen will research a condition caused by the parasite called cystic hydatid disease.

Andersen is conducting his research in China because about 1,000 cases are reported there each year.

The disease is an occupational hazard for those who mainly live around sheep and sheep dogs, Andersen said.

Andersen first conducted research in China several years ago with Dr. Peter M. Schantz, official at the Division of Parasitic Diseases in Atlanta, Ga.

Schantz consulted in Utah for 12 years with Andersen and is known as an expert on disease control, Andersen said.

The disease was detected in Utah in the late 1930s when sheep dogs were imported from Australia, and since 1944, over 50 cases have been treated in Utah.

The program that was devised for Utah was adapted to the China project, Andersen said.

The condition is caused by a very small tapeworm about 4 to 6 millimeters long. It lives in the small intestine of dogs and is passed through feces. Eggs from the tapeworm contaminate vegetation and animals and then eat the plants, Andersen said.

Once inside the host, the eggs penetrate through the intestinal lining, enter the blood stream and are filtered out, usually in the lungs and liver. The parasite then grows into a larval cystic form in which thousands of tiny tapeworm heads reproduce asexually, he said.

Humans can contract the tapeworms by simply petting an infected dog. The parasite would then develop in a person just as it would in ruminant animals, animals that graze. This disease is now called "cystic hydatid disease."

Since animals are infected by the disease in the liver and the lungs, a person can contract the parasite by eating the infected portions of an animal.

In ruminant animals, the cysts generally do not get large enough within their normal life span to cause any problems for the animals.

In humans, the cysts continue to grow and will eventually cause such problems as labored breathing or liver malfunction. The disease may be fatal if the cysts continue to grow without being surgically removed.

The amount of the grants and the time period which they can use and the money varies.

The Thrasher Research Fund gives out grants every six months pertaining to how major health problems impact children, said Julie Busse, administrative assistant for the fund. Thrasher allocates funds for the appropriate transfer of technology which is to take results of various search and provide a practical application for people, she said.

The grant money will be used in preparing and distributing educational materials on the disease, training dogs with a drug which will move the tapeworm, and educating people, especially children, not to feed the liver or lungs of sheep to their dogs, Andersen said.

Aviation played an important role in establishing the authority of the new Turkish Republic during the two decades between World War I and World War II. A credible military arm was established for external defense and maintaining internal order; a civilian national airline was organized for joining the areas of the state more closely together; and elevated levels of scientific, technical, and mechanical knowledge were introduced to the population. By the end of the 1930s, Turkey had the most advanced aviation establishment, both civilian and military, of any Middle Eastern state.

Sign language program to expand

by SANDRA D. DEMCHUK
Universe Staff Writer

After years of silence, the deaf are beginning to be heard loud and clear by the BYU administration, as a proposal to expand the American Sign Language program at BYU is being seriously considered. Recently, a faculty board approved the proposed syllabus, text and instructor of an upper-level signing class. Given the go-ahead by the office of the academic vice president, BYU's ASL program will enter the ranks of other foreign language courses that offer general education credit, said Madison Sowell, chair of the Faculty General Education Council.

"The ASL proposal is still a working proposal which the Faculty General Education Council reviewed, and as far as we are concerned, it is workable. We have no objection to granting it status as a general education course," Sowell said.

However, the dean of the department that sponsored the proposal said celebrations could be premature because many factors could stop the proposal at this stage.

"I would hate to give false hope and say something may happen when it may not," said Harold L. Miller, dean of General and Honors Education. "I do not want to give students who are hoping to be given cumulative credit the idea that this (approval) is just around the corner because they don't know what the decision will be."

The decision about what courses will count as general education credit is a multi-stage process, involving the approval of the department, a faculty review board and the academic vice presidents of the university, he said. As it stands, the ASL program lacks the necessary "capstone" course that qualifies the program for general education foreign language credit, a fact which discourages enrollment in upper-level classes, one ASL instructor said.

"Because (the ASL program) lacks general education requirement credit, I have had in the past years 12 students in the 101 course, three students in the 102 course and only one student enrolled in 201," said Minnie Mae Wilding-Diaz, an ASL instructor.

Assignment at Benson Institute

Church-service volunteer helps BYU

by VIRGINIA MARTIN
Universe Staff Writer

Disguised as a BYU faculty member, Albert Pearson has been helping BYU students for the past 13 months as a church-service volunteer for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"Church service is not to be confused with regular missionary calls," said Laren R. Robison, a former director of the Ezra Taft Benson Agriculture and Food Institute.

Pearson and his wife, Harriet E. Pearson, who were assigned to work as church-service volunteers for the Benson Institute, said their LDS church assignment was not a proselyting mission.

Church-service volunteers can receive assignments to the Benson Institute, the Polynesian Cultural Center in Hawaii or Nauvoo Restoration, said Don LeFevre, public communications director for the LDS Church.

Church-service volunteers are also called to do language translations, and they occasionally do legal or engineering work. They can serve from six months to a year and a half.

In the Pearsons's case, he was approaching retirement at Michigan State University and decided they were willing to serve in Provo, Robison said.

At BYU, Pearson taught an animal growth and development course for the Animal Science Department.

Robison said the department had been trying for a number of years to bring Pearson to teach at BYU, saying he is a superb meat scientist who is well-known in the industry.

"The Animal Science Department ended up with a four-star general," he said.

Pearson was needed to advise welfare services on the preparation of meat products, Robison said.

Pearson also wrote a chapter for the book "Meat and Health," which is part of a series called "Advances in Meat Research." He said the book talks about advantages and disadvantages of some things in our diets.

Meat is one of the best sources of iron, he said.

"There is a factor in meat which helps in the absorption of iron," Pearson said. "Iron in animal products is more readily available than that in vegetables or cereals."

Each chapter is written by various experts in the field, Pearson said. He also edited the next volume of the series, "Growth Regulation in Farm Animals."

The Pearsons have completed their service time, and both said they enjoyed the people they worked with at BYU.

Fan trash a part of the job

Those who attend BYU sporting events, devotionals or special events may not realize what goes on behind the scene to make it all possible.

"It takes 35 students and five supervisors four hours to clean all the rooms in the football stadium after a game," said Mike Averett, area custodial supervisor.

Ivan Fuller, assistant supervisor of the Custodial Department, said a typical basketball game ends at 9:30 p.m., and it is not until 3 or 4 a.m. before everything is done.

Sometimes there will be stake conference or something the next day that takes extra time to set up and get ready for, he said.

Eric Short, 22, a computer science major from Bellevue, Wash., said, "The late hours are hard. However, it is not so much the work, but the people you work with, that make it worthwhile."

AT-A-GLANCE

The At-A-Glance column is for announcements and notices of meetings of organizations and groups which are not BYUSA-sanctioned clubs. Announcements from officially recognized clubs appear in the Clubnotes column, which is published on Thursdays. Submissions for At-A-Glance must be received by noon on Monday for Tuesday's paper and by noon on Wednesday for Thursday's paper and must be resubmitted each week for continuing activities. Because of space restrictions, each announcement will be printed only once. All items must be double-spaced, typed on an 8 1/2x11 sheet of paper and should not exceed 25 words. Submissions of a commercial nature, or which advertise activities resulting in remuneration to anyone, will not be accepted for publication. No submissions will be accepted by phone.

Taking multiple drugs can be a health hazard

By STEPHANIE L. PERRY
Universe Staff Writer

Interactions between different prescription drugs and adverse reactions to medicines don't just strike senior citizens who are taking a variety of medications.

A drug reaction or interaction can happen to anyone at any time, said BYU professor of health sciences, Richard Hurley. He knows because it happened to him.

In 1979, Hurley suffered a permanent injury, almost total hearing loss and partially paralyzed face because of an interaction or reaction between medications he was given for an infection.

Hurley said the inability to smile and talk plainly at times can be an impediment. And not being able to do things he used to do took some adjustment. "It (the experience) definitely changed my life," he said.

Hurley said this problem occurs at a frequently alarming rate. In fact, one in eight hospital beds in the United States holds a person who has experienced a drug interaction or reaction.

Vance Loertscher, assistant director of pharmacy over clinical services at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, said most drug interactions happen to people who are taking multiple prescriptions. However, he said it is sometimes difficult to tell when a drug reaction occurs in this population.

When people are taking a number of drugs, a reaction or interaction may go unnoticed. A person may think it is simply another symptom of their illness or ignore it altogether, he said.

Rodney Dallin, a Provo pharmacist, said drug interactions do happen, but they are rare. They are more common in the elderly or those who are taking many drugs, he said.

Hurley said, "There is no such thing as a safe drug." All medications cause physiological changes in the body. Even common aspirin has some side effects. "Drugs are toxic, but they are very valuable."

Loertscher, however, said safe drugs do exist, but they can be dangerous if not taken correctly. "All drugs have side effects. That's just a part of drug therapy."

The effects of medications on individuals can take on a "myriad of directions," Hurley said. Some can be relatively minor, but as in his case, others can be life-threatening.

Dallin said drugs affect all people differently. Some people will experience a reaction to a particular drug or drugs, while others never will.

Loertscher said drug interactions are not difficult to predict, but "there is no guarantee that an interaction will or won't happen," even when it is known to occur. Every patient's body is different. Consequently, consumers can take some steps to help prevent drug disasters.

Loertscher said the dangers of the drug therapy have been minimized by health professionals becoming aware of the reactions and interactions among drugs.

He said most of today's pharmacies are computerized and contain programs which alert them to possible interactions.

Moreover, if the patients are aware, they can have some control over interactions. Education is important, Loertscher said.

Hurley said in the college environment, students are making decisions about things which have always been made for them before, including being faced with many choices of medications.

Hurley said students may think they have the same sickness as their roommates and therefore can take the same prescription.

However, people should never take medication prescribed for someone else. "A prescription is as personal as anything that will be done for you," he said.

A doctor takes a variety of factors into consideration when prescribing medication, including age, weight and sex as well as the symptoms, Hurley said.

Another problem occurs when patients try to diagnose their own illnesses. "Self-diagnosis becomes very dangerous," he said.

A great number of diseases have the same initial symptoms, but a doctor can pinpoint an illness early on and prescribe the correct medication for it.

Hurley also said during the cold and flu season, people should avoid taking over-the-counter drugs which contain more ingredients than are needed for their symptoms.

"Just because a product is available over-the-counter doesn't mean it is safe," Hurley said. Such medications can react with prescription drugs as well.

Moreover, patients should never leave the doctor's office without completely understanding their medications.

Hurley said some questions to ask are the following: What is the drug supposed to do? When and how is it supposed to be taken? What are the side effects, and what foods, drinks, other drugs or activities should be avoided while taking the medicine?

Once you understand the drug, Hurley said, follow your doctor's instructions explicitly. Don't stop taking the drug or double up on the dosage. Also, keep your doctor or doctors informed of all medications you are currently taking.

The responsibility for attempting to control drug interactions is shared. The patient must follow instructions carefully, while the doctor is responsible for prescribing the right drug in the right dosage at the right time, he said.

BYU law professor moonlights as actor

By MICHAEL A. GUELLER
Universe Staff Writer

Rumor has it that a certain professor at the J. Reuben Clark Law School is acting a lot like Ebenezer Scrooge.

As a matter of fact, President Rex Lee is aware of this and fully approves of him continuing in his role. He said in spite of this behavior, he is "the very best as a lawyer and law professor."

Rick Varner, a BYU law student, positively identified the professor as none other than Richard Wilkins.

When confronted with the incriminating evidence of such caliber witnesses, Wilkins said, "I love it."

Wilkins loves acting and theater and has played in 22 shows over the last six years.

He passionately refers to it as his "avocation." He is starring as Ebenezer Scrooge at Salt Lake City's Hale Center Theater this Christmas season.

Cody Hale, manager of the Hale Center Theater in Orem, said, "Richard Wilkins is one of our most energetic actors with a lot of spunk. When he's mean, he's very, very mean."

As a husband and father of three, a high councilman in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, law professor, part-time legal consultant and actor, Wilkins said, "I have no free time. Theater has turned into a family affair."

"My favorite role has been Ebenezer Scrooge in Charles Dickens's play, 'A Christmas Carol,' but I also act in the classroom," he said.

Varner said, "Professor Wilkins teaches law in a very animated and exciting way. He makes you excited."

Commenting on Wilkins's dramatic talents, Varner said, "His portrayal of Scrooge was the best I've ever seen - only bettered by George C. Scott."

President Lee, who has seen Wilkins perform in several plays, said, "He is Broadway quality in my opinion."

If given the opportunity to act professionally and receive equal pay to his present salary as a law professor, Wilkins said, "I'd do it in a minute. But if you can't be an actor, be a teacher, since you have a captive audience day by day."

"A Christmas Carol," with Richard Wilkins, is playing at the Hale Center Theater in Salt Lake. For more information, call 484-9257.

'Christmas Pageant' is alternative to Scrooge

By MICHAEL A. GUELLER
Universe Staff Writer

"The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" is a play that challenges Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" and is a fresh look at the traditional Christmas story, according to Jody Renstrom, owner of the Valley Center Playhouse in Lindon.

Director Spencer Hardin said, "The first time I read 'The Best Christmas Pageant Ever' as a short story, I cried. It lets us know God really gave his Son to an imperfect world."

Renstrom said the play is about the Herdman family and their wild and sadistic children who terrorize their neighborhood community.

When the young ruffians try out for their school play and threaten and intimidate their fellow students from auditioning, the director decides to cast all of the Herdman children in the play.

The director later discovers the children had no concept of Jesus and his birth in Bethlehem and observes the change in them which occurs as they are touched by the true Christmas spirit, Renstrom said.

The play, written by Barbara Robinson, is hilarious, especially when the Herdman family hit the story head on, Renstrom said.

Originally the Avon Corporation printed 800,000 copies of the story and used it to promote their products. The story was also made into a television movie and starred Loretta Swit, she said.

Jerri Swartz of Orem and her nine-year-old daughter, Cari Jo, play parts in the production and said they enjoy being able to perform together. Cari Jo plays Gladys, an angel who appears to the shepherds, and Jerri Swartz plays Mrs. McKarthy.

"The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" plays Monday, Friday and Saturday evenings until Dec. 17.

It will then show every night until Dec. 22. For more information call 224-5310.

Wrestlers injured in Vegas meet

By PAUL BARTMESS
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU wrestling team placed 10th of 47 teams at the annual Hall of Fame Classic in Las Vegas. Injuries to top performers Rick Evans and Phil Armstrong kept BYU from placing any wrestlers at the tournament.

"The injuries to Rick and Phil really hurt our chances to place well at the tournament," said Coach Alan Albright. "It's really a shame that both injuries had to happen during a big meet because we could have done a lot better had we stayed healthy."

Defending national champion Oklahoma State won the tournament beating competition from all over the country.

The annual meet usually has 15 of the top 20 teams in the country in attendance.

Don Vantassell was the top performer for BYU, winning two out of his four matches. Everyone on the team won at least one match on the way to helping the team score 13 points at the meet.

"Don wrestled very well, along with the rest of our team," Albright said. "We're a very young team and will get better as the year goes on and we get more experience."

Before being injured, Evans beat the defending national champion, Matt Ruppel, from Lehi University. Evans upset Ruppel 10-8 in the first round of the tournament.

"The victory by Rick was probably the highlight of the meet for the team," Albright said. "I don't think we've ever had a wrestler at BYU defeat a defending national champion before."

The wrestlers enjoyed the opportunity to go up against some of the best wrestlers in the country.

"We know now we can compete with anyone in the nation," said 178-pound wrestler Layne Shepherd. "This meet was a good opportunity to see where we are as a team."

The wrestling team competes next in the Sunshine Open in Florida on December 28 and 29.

BYU dominates racquetball tourney

By DAVID FARNWORTH
Universe Sports Writer

In a tournament with Idaho State University Saturday, the BYU racquetball team dominated the Bengals and then went on to defeat a Pocatello city league team at the Metropolitan Health Spa.

Coach Sylvia Sawyer said playing the city team was just a goodwill gesture. "We were special guests at the Metropolitan Health Spa. It was a chance for the people of Pocatello to meet to know the team. There were a lot of good players there," she said.

The Cougars dominated the Bengals, losing only two of the 38 games they played. Top players included Jerry Steck, who had only 14 points scored against him during tournament.

Other top players were Nathan Passey and Jon Mortensen. In his first year with the team, Mortensen is very impressive, said Roger Flick, assistant coach.

"He surprised us all by winning all of his games. A year ago he was in a beginner racquetball class. He has improved exceptionally," Flick said.

The women's team also topped ISU, losing only nine of their 42 games. Top players were Cindy Van Orman, Jeanette Hartman and Lisa McLaws. McLaws had only 10 points scored against her, compared to the next closest player, who had 43.

Sawyer is happy about the progress of the team. "I am extremely pleased because they have put a lot into the practices. The comradery is nice, and they really encourage each other," she said.

GINCH wins 4-A finals

By PAUL BARTMESS
Universe Sports Writer

The 4-A flag football championship game was a grudge match between two teams that have been competing in intramural play for the past four years. It ended with the GINCH team defeating the Ghetto Magic Athletic Club team 36-21.

"We've had a rivalry with them (GINCH) for the past four years, and they're always tough," said GMAC receiver and defensive back John Peterson. "They played really well and deserved to win this one."

The GINCH team also had respect for the GMAC team.

"They beat us last year in the playoffs so we were really up to play them this year," said GINCH quarterback Lael Call. "We have quite a rivalry going with them, and it's always nice to beat them."

The game was close at the beginning with both teams trading touchdowns. GMAC tied the game in the first half on a fourth down 30-yard pass to Chris Myers.

"It was a nice touchdown pass and a great catch at a clutch time," Peterson said. "We really had the momentum at that point."

The score was tied 13-13 at halftime as both teams tried to take control of the game through the air. Early in the second half GINCH took control after the GMAC center snapped the ball over the head of the punter resulting in a safety.

"The safety really turned the game around for us," Call said. "It seemed like at that point we really took control and started playing a lot better as a team."

"The safety really hurt us because not only did they get two points, but they also got control of the ball," Peterson said. "We could never really pull it together after that point."

GINCH quickly took advantage of the safety with touchdown passes from Call to Ed Chatterly and Gary Daniels resulting in the final score of 36-21.

GINCH now has the opportunity to play in the national intramural flag football championships in New Orleans.

The trip to New Orleans is not sponsored by the university, so it is necessary for the team to raise money for the tournament itself.

"We would really like to play in the national tournament if we could afford it," Call said. "Right now we need to talk to some sponsors and see if we can raise some money to make the trip."

In other flag football tournament action the 127th Ward won the 1-A championship game, Vintage won the 2-A crown, and Embo won the 3-A title. The 1-A, 2-A and 3-A tournaments were single elimination, while the 4-A tournament was double elimination.

Close to 5,000 people took part in the flag football season and final tournament. 432 teams started out in search of one of the four championship crowns.

"The tournament really turned out to be a big success," said Mike O'Connor, graduate assistant in charge of flag football. "Whenever a tournament of this size is put on with little or no problems, it has to be considered a success."

The 4-A tournament was a success for both the GMAC and GINCH teams.

"I really enjoy the opportunity to release some stress and play competi-

Women cagers get first victory

By LARA TRAMMELL
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU women's basketball team chalked up its first win of the season Saturday in the consolation game of the Domino's Pizza/Lady Rebel Classic in University, Miss.

The Cougars improved their season record to 1-3 by defeating Alcorn State University 68-65 in the tournament hosted by the University of Mississippi.

The game was close, and the Cougars had to overcome a seven point lead held by Alcorn State at halftime to win it in the end.

After shooting only 28 percent in the first half, the Cougars improved to a 50 percent field goal average and outscored Alcorn State by 10 points in the second half.

The Cougar defense shut down the Alcorn State offense in the second half, only allowing them 12 of 34 shots to hold them to 35 percent from the field.

"This is the best in terms of poise and confidence we've played this year," said BYU coach Jeanie Wilson.

BYU's scoring attack was led by junior guard Kimberly Talbot from Orem, who played the whole 40 minutes, and junior guard Lisa White from Idaho Falls, Idaho. Both players scored 17 points for the Cougars.

Junior forward Lisa Rathbun, from Cadillac, Mich., pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the team.

In the first game of the tournament BYU lost to Southeastern Louisiana University in another close game, 78-82.

The Cougars were behind at the half and never quite managed to take the lead, the difference being Southeastern Louisiana's 62 percent free throw average against BYU's 58 percent.

Rathbun, a Second Team All-HCAC player, had the high score of the game for either team with 22 points as well as 11 rebounds.

White had 14 points, and freshman forward Amberli Gustin from Boise, Idaho, scored 12. Talbot rounded out the four BYU players in double digits with 11 points.

Wilson said this is the depth of the team at work. "We have so much depth that the hard part is deciding who starts and who doesn't. But everyone will get playing time," she said.

The Cougars are in Hawaii for two games on December 6 and 8 against the University of Hawaii Wahines, who go into the games with a 1-2 record.

BYU's leaves turned into fertilizer

BY PATTI HARMER

Universe Staff Writer

Fall came, the leaves fell off the trees and the grounds crew took the leaves away. But not to a trash can. They were recycled.

The leaves are turned into a mixture to fertilize the soil at one of the biggest compost operations for a university, according to Roy Peterman, the grounds maintenance manager for BYU.

The leaves are converted into a humus type soil, a good make up of sand and soil, which is returned to the flower beds and other areas on campus, he said.

The operation is located at 2250 N. University Avenue, which is north of the Ellsworth Building, Peterman said.

Eldon Neves, owner of Seven Trees, a leaves-clipping service in Spanish Fork, has been taking care of all of the leaves in Provo City.

Most of Provo's leaves are also converted into compost, and individuals purchase the mixture from Neves, he said.

Laundry Plus is making wash day less tedious

By TRENT E. POOR

Universe Staff Writer

A Provo Laundromat offers BYU students more than a place to wash clothes, said the owner of Laundry Plus, a business located in the Plum Tree shopping center.

The pluses offered at Laundry Plus are the snackbar, a living room with a large television, video games, a tanning booth, a playland for kids and a toning salon, said Gay Creery, who is part owner of Laundry Plus.

"The idea came up over the kitchen table," Creery said.

Creery and her daughters came up with the idea by thinking about all of the things they liked and disliked about Laundromats and decided on a few things they would like to see in a Laundromat.

Laundry Plus has had success since its opening two years ago, she said. Creery plans to open another Laundry Plus in the summer.

"People like what they find here. It's safe and clean, they can exercise, they can get a tan, their children can play, and they can have a sandwich all while they do their laundry," she said.

Promotions and the toning salon helped the business to get established in the first year, Creery said, but the laundry part now stands on its own.

Mark Marrott, a UVCC student, said the main reason he goes to Laundry Plus is for the laundry facilities, but he admits it has a lot of features that appeal to people.

"The toning salon is just psychological," said Marrott, who is an athletic trainer.

Donnell Clegg, a sophomore from California majoring in family science, was watching TV while she was waiting for her turn at the tanning bed. She said, "It's great. I like it because it has a homey atmosphere."

Kent Busby, a BYU sophomore majoring in business, picked Laundry Plus over his apartment complex laundry facilities because of the modern equipment. "It's a good business, it has modern equipment and it's clean."

Creery said Laundry Plus has customers that come from as far away as Salt Lake City and Weber. "They save their laundry for two weeks and do their laundry here when they have to make a trip to Provo."

Bradley centers attention on kids

By GREG F. BROWN

Shawn Bradley, one of BYU basketball's newest team members, is also the newest team member working on behalf of local handicapped children.

Bradley, the 7-foot-6-inch center on the BYU Men's Basketball Team, accepted an invitation to be the celebrity spokesman for Kids On The Move, the Orem-based early intervention program for children who have developmental disabilities or delays.

"I love kids; I've always loved kids," Bradley said.

The best way to be a factor in these kids' lives is to be an example and a friend to them, he said.

Monica Hess, account executive for the Bradley Agency, a public relations agency run by BYU students, said she is not exactly sure what Bradley will be able to do for the program because of his busy schedule.

However, Karen Hahne, president of the program, said if all he has time for is to be a friend, that will still be a lot.

"The kids love him," Hahne said.

Three-year-old Lea Roney, 1991 poster child for Kids On The Move, is sharing the spotlight with Bradley. Roney is one of the 45 children with special needs enrolled in the early intervention education program.

Early intervention consists of intensive therapy programs for handicapped children from infancy to age five.

State laws require that at age three toddlers become the responsibility of the school districts.

Before the age of three, the children are the responsibility of the community.

Often times the children can become productive, contributing members of society, Hahne said.

The program's current facility is located on the UVCC Provo campus, but the facility is only temporary.

The school has been involved in a great deal of fund raising and hopes to build its own facility in the future.

Clowning around proves profitable

By VALERIE SHEWELT
Universe Staff Writer

With sirens whining, Fireman Freddie entered a large classroom in the Technology Department right before a class was to start. Every head turned in his direction as he ran up to his victim, DiSean Kendall, and wished him a happy birthday he'll never forget.

When Randy Stevens is not dressed up as Fireman Freddie, you can usually find him in the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center supply area where he has worked for the past 10 years.

Some of Stevens' other personalities include Marvelous Marvin, the Jolly Jester, the Grim Reaper, Gonga the gorilla and One-Eyed Willie the pirate.

Stevens said he has been a clown ever since he was born. He always liked to entertain, to have fun and to dress up. At the age of 10 he made his first dragon costume out of a sheet, complete with spikes and a cardboard head.

One year when Stevens decided he wanted to be one of the three Musketeers, he went to BYU's library and did research until he found the perfect costume. His wife then helped him construct the costume which included, a cut up sombrero for a hat and a hollowed-out branch for a sword.

Stevens said the costume was so much work to make that he wore it the next four years on Halloween.

Stevens runs a business out of his home called Karacter Connections where he makes appointments for appearances and performances. He said an appearance is a costumed delivery of a card or a gift.

A performance, on the other hand, is a 30-minute costumed entertainment.

He said an example of a performance would be Pancho Villa bringing a pinata.

His business is more than just handing a balloon to someone. Stevens said he works with the people setting up the event and comes up with a skit idea.

Stevens also brings his talents to campus, performing in various BYUSA activities, the President's Christmas Party, Student Leadership Development functions and various event promotions.

He said the main purpose of being a character is not to be recognized. A character is an actor portraying someone, not just a clown.

There are a couple of dreams Stevens said he has yet to fulfill. First, he wants to perform as a Disney character.

He said he is too tall to be Mickey Mouse, but he would make a perfect Goofy.

Stevens said he also wants to open his own shop. The store would be a place where people could buy novelties, make-up, patterns and material, accessories and rent a character all in one place.

Eco Response club promotes campus recycling

By PATTI HARMER
Universe Staff Writer

Eco Response, the environmental club, is trying to make BYU students aware of the advantages of recycling.

James Ott, the president of Eco Response, said that the club's plan of providing more kinds of bins on campus, is being put on hold by the administration.

"We are waiting for administration to give us the OK. It is pretty much in their hands right now," he said.

The club has been working very closely with Roy Peterman, the grounds maintenance manager, Ott said. "We want to have more glass and plastic bins made available to the public so that they can have somewhere they can take their recyclable items," he said.

Another project the club is involved with includes a Global Response program, which is very similar to the Amnesty International program, Ott said. Other projects include a Sub for Santa project, a re-forestation program to plant more trees on campus next spring, and the Rock Canyon issue and how Seven Peaks Ski Resort will affect it, Ott said.

"We are working with the national parks on this issue and have issued petitions concerning the environmental hazards of putting a sewage line through the canyon itself. We have also taken telephone surveys of how residents and others feel about the environment being tampered with," he said.

Drivers urged to try Utah's scenic roads

By RICHARD K. LEFRANDT
Universe Staff Writer

Taking the road less traveled is what a statewide committee is trying to encourage both visitors and Utah residents to do.

A committee concerned with the awareness and promotion of scenic highways and byways in Utah has put together a brochure that maps out Utah's less traveled roads.

"The committee is there to help prepare a statewide marketing plan that will give local agencies something to work with," said Brent McBath, branch chief for the Uinta National Forest.

The committee will also provide them with potential sources for information.

"Utah is setting a trend that is carrying to other states," said Michael Mack, the director for the Utah County Travel Council.

The program's goal is to eventually have an interpretive plan for byways and backways for the whole state, said Darrell Cook, the director of the Department of Community and Economic Development.

"... we will accomplish the common goal that we have as a committee, that being to identify common scenic attractions in Utah's byways and backways," Cook said.

The committee exists to assist and coordinate, not dictate, McBath said.

Local agencies will put together the funding, and local areas are in charge of putting the information together, McBath said.

The Utah Travel Council, Bureau of Land Management, State Parks and Recreation, Association of County Commissioners, Travel Council Regional Directors, National Parks and National Forest are all part of this statewide committee, McBath said.

"The brochure can be purchased for $4 at National Forest and National Park headquarters, also from the Utah County Travel Council and the local statewide visitor centers," Cook said.
